NEW MEXICO IS ONE OF ONLY 11 STATES THAT DOESN'T APPOINT QUALIFIED EXPERTS TO ITS PUBLIC REGULATION COMMISSION

New Mexico, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and a few others are the only states to still allow politicians to regulate public utilities, rates and service.

There is a proposal to put qualified professionals — not politicians — on our Regulation Commission. The bipartisan proposal would require credentialed experts to oversee our utilities, and these Commissioners, who would regulate fair rates and reliable service, would be prohibited from having any personal financial interest in any public utility.
